

How A City Says I Love You Too

People live in a city but a city can also live in its people.
University heights has a heart and each citizen is a valve, each citizen is intricate to the rhythm that keeps the city pumping, its blood creating a family without genetics. A D.N.A made from nothing but neighborhoods and compassion. Everyone here is an inheritance of empathy and dedication . University Heights has a spine and it is educators reading. University Heights has a strong pair of lungs and it is leaders, leading. University Heights has eyes and it is the children, Dreaming. In 1950 University Heights smiled with all of its hearts, all of its hands Grabbed each other and shook. University Heights look at itself in the mirror and liked

What it saw. University Heights has legs long as volunteer lines, so the strides are wide.
When University Heights needs help it knows how to help itself. University Heights practices fantastic self care, it has learned how to hug itself close, knit like a midwest sweater. University Heights has so many minds so it has gotten great at changing them.

University Heights does not have a voice, instead it has thousands, all saying “how can i help, thank you, you’re welcome. Thank you, Please join us, thank you, I appreciate you, thank you, congratulations, thank you, you have my condolences, thank you, ill be there, thank you, you can do this, thank you, we can do this. Thank you. We can fix this, thank you, what do we need, thank you, you need a hand, thank you, help, thank you, Thank you. I love you too, I love you too, I love you too.
